

ABSTRACT

Use of commodity operation systems and some proprietary and legacy operating systems can be enhanced by providing a facility for determining usage profiles of applications programs. From the usage profiles, actual usage of the computer resources is inferred. Many things, including charge-backs to users can be established using this new resource.

Charge backs are enhanced by creating a billing factor from said profile and applying it to actual user/application usage time.